Canadian Forces to investigate Wilcox's peers

MILITARY The Canadian Forces is launching an investigation into the conduct of several soldiers who served alongside Matthew Wilcox in Afghanistan.

The Cape Breton Post has learned the commander of the reserve forces in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island is looking into allegations of misuse of weapons by reservists, which surfaced in two short video clips entered into evidence by the defence during Wilcox's court martial.

Col. Tom Stinson, commander of 36 Brigade Group, said now that Wilcox has been sentenced the forces can ask probing questions of its soldiers.

'Explosive to the faith'

Locals grapple with the news a N.S. bishop arraigned on child porn charges

Parishioners at a Nova Scotia archdiocese where children allegedly endured decades of sexual abuse at the hands of Roman Catholic priests were urged to keep their faith intact Thursday as the man who helped to save old wounds surrendered to police on child pornography charges.

Archbishop Anthony Mancini of Halifax appealed to past victims of abuse and parishioners in the diocese of Antigonish after Bishop Raymond Lahey turned himself in at Ottawa police headquarters.

"We are going through a very painful, contemporary experience of the mystery of faith," Mancini told a news conference in Sydney. "I call on you to be hopeful because we do believe in new life and in new possibilities."

Parishioner John MacEachern said he felt like he'd been punched in the stomach when he learned his bishop had been charged with possessing and importing child pornography in Ontario.

"If it proves to be true, it is just tragic," said MacEachern, a high school vice-principal in Glace Bay.

MacEachern said Lahey was held in wide esteem in the diocese for his work as theologian and a liturgist, and for brokering a $15-million settlement for parishioners who claimed to have been sexually abused by priests in the area dating back to 1950.

He called the 69-year-old priest "the face of the settlement" and the person who was going to help the local church move on from the abuse.

"If this thing is true, the contradiction is explosive to the faith of some people," he said. "It's a contradiction, and that's what challenges faith all the time."

In Ottawa, a sombre Lahey climbed out of a black sedan and pushed through a crush of reporters to surrender to the charges that have stunned his flock and shaken an already tarnished institution.

Dressed in street clothes and ignoring questions, Lahey was accompanied by lawyer Michael Edelson, a high profile criminal lawyer who represented Ottawa Mayor Larry O'Brien when he was acquitted this spring of influence-peddling charges.

Forced to face the forgotten past

VICTIM Ronald Martin, who launched the lawsuit claiming the Roman Catholic diocese of Antigonish failed to protect children after decades of sexual abuse from priests, said the charges to Raymond Lahey have shaken both his personal faith and his trust in the church.

"I'm struggling today," Martin said after meeting with Archbishop Anthony Mancini Thursday.

Martin's own brother wrote a suicide note in 2002 that led to charges of sex crimes being laid against a priest.

"I've been committed to this faith my whole life and through this whole thing," Martin said. "I'm not sure any more what I can do with the Catholic church."

The charges against Lahey were filed last Friday — 10 days after officials found images of "concern" on his laptop computer at the Ottawa airport as he was returning from a foreign country. He resigned from his post with the diocese of Antigonish on the weekend before news of the charges became public. In August, the bishop announced details of the settlement involving sexual abuse in the diocese, which includes Cape Breton. Lahey was not implicated in the case and had been in the diocese for only the last six years.

Ottawa police Const. Alain Boucher said Lahey wasn't the target of a police investigation at the airport.

"It appears to have been a random check," he said.

Premier invited to forum after prison construction delay
SPRINGHILL An invitation to a public forum in Springhill is being written and sent to Nova Scotia Premier Darrell Dexter.

The invitation comes after Dexter's NDP government delayed a decision to construct an $18-million provincial correctional facility that was to be built in Springhill. The project was originally announced by the previous Conservative government.

"I, for one, would like to see the Town of Springhill invite our premier ... to show him, not only on paper, our facilities and the selected site," said Coun. Norman Rushton, who presented the motion to town council this week.

The motion came after several councillors and Mayor Allen Dill expressed dismay in the provincial government's decision.

Blaze caused by unextinguished campfire: Officials

PHILIP CROUCHER
 philip.croucher@metronews.ca

There are no charges pending in spring's Spryfield-area wildfire that investigators said Thursday was caused by an unextinguished campfire.

The Department of Natural Resources announced in a morning release they completed their investigation into the fire that destroyed eight homes and whipped flames and thick clouds of smoke across an area between 800 and 1,200 hectares. Most of the homes suffering damage were on Aarons Way and Fortress Drive, both off of Purcell's Cove Road.

Investigators have determined the fire's cause was an unextinguished campfire pit on the west bank on MacIntosh Road, which is north of Roaches Pond. That campfire was from April 29, but investigators say the fire flared up the next day and, with the help of strong winds, pushed the blaze towards Purcell's Cove Road.

fire into the morning of April 30, and Halifax Regional Fire spokesman Capt. Dave Meldrum told CBC they were planning to come back in the mid-afternoon to check on hot spots, but the fire flared up again. Hundreds of people were evacuated during the wildfire, which was brought under control late on May 1.

"It was someone with a campfire and they didn't extinguish it," said Walter Fanning, director of forest protection services with the Department of Natural Resources. "It took off on the 29th and then it kept going on the 30th once the weather conditions got severe."

While they located the source of the fire, investigators can't identify the person responsible for not properly extinguishing it because of a lack of evidence. But even if accidental in nature, "it's very serious and charges can be laid against (the person) for that," Fanning added.

The investigation also uncovered two deliberately set fires the night of April 30 near J.L. Ilsley High School, but Fanning said the suspected arsonists didn't contribute to the main blaze.

Caregiver program on target to help 750 people: Health minister

FUNDING Nova Scotia Health Minister Maureen MacDonald says the province is on target to service up to 750 people over the next year through its Caregiver Allowance Program.

The opposition has been critical in the legislature of the program, which they say appears to be rejecting too many people in need of receiving care in their homes.

The NDP government rolled out a Conservative program in August that gives family caregivers a $400 monthly allowance while it works on its own version.

MacDonald says 140 applications have been approved so far for the allowance, while another 286 are still waiting to be assessed.

She says another 276 have been rejected under a set of five standardized criteria people must meet to qualify.

MacDonald says the program is budgeted to help up to 750 people.

Proposal in works for convention centre

DEVELOPMENT Government kicked off the next step in building a new World Trade and Convention Centre for Halifax — finding out how much it's going to cost.

The province and the Halifax Regional Municipality have asked developer Rank Group for a detailed proposal for a complex to replace the outgrown WTCC.

That proposal is due in February and will include a price. The government is also funding a "shadow bid" by another consultant to compare with Rank's proposal.

After looking at both, there will be a final decision on whether to go ahead with the centre.

"We're looking at February for the decision, March for the project," said Transportation and Infrastructure Renewal Minister Bill Estabrooks.

The estimated cost by the previous Tory government was $300 million. It's not known whether the federal government will help foot the bill.

Estabrooks said the province plans to be a "prominent partner," but it could still pull the plug on the project if they don't like Rank's proposal. He added there is a limit on how much the province is willing to spend but didn't say what that was.

CRIME Four men are facing drug trafficking charges after a search by police at a residence in Dartmouth on Wednesday night.

Halifax Regional Police say the search of a residence at Highfield Park in Dartmouth resulted in a quantity of marijuana, cocaine, hash and other drug paraphernalia being found, with four men then being arrested on scene without incident.

Facing charges are three Dartmouth men — aged 26, 29 and 32 — and a 28-year-old man from Ostrea Lake.

Treaty Day marks 'partnership'

Mi'kmaq celebrate, reflect on years of 'special relationship'

JON TATTIE
for Metro Halifax

Hundreds of people gathered in Halifax Thursday to mark Treaty Day and kick off Mi'kmaq History Month in Nova Scotia.

"Today's celebration is the symbol of our unique and special relationship with the federal and provincial governments. We are treaty partners; this is a partnership between two nations," Chief Terrance Paul of the Assembly of Nova Scotia Mi'kmaq Chiefs said to the crowd at an afternoon event at the World Trade and Convention Centre. "Treaty Day is about celebrating, but it is also about reflecting and remembering the sacrifices and triumphs of our people."

Treaty Day marks the Treaty of 1752, signed between the Mi'kmaq nation and the British colonial power.

Paul also paid tribute to Donald Marshall Jr., who died this summer. Twenty years ago, the Marshall Report shone light on the systemic racism in Nova Scotia that led Marshall to spend more than a decade in jail for a murder he didn't commit. Ten years ago, he won a landmark Supreme Court affirmation of Mi'kmaq treaty rights.

"Junior firmly believed in our rights," Paul said. "... However, the Mi'kmaq are still seeking the recognition and implementation of our treaty rights to the fishery. "After about 250 years, we can wait no longer."

Premier Darrell Dexter, who is also the minister for aboriginal affairs, focused his speech Thursday on the future economic powerbase aboriginal youth will provide for the province.

"Fifty per cent of today's Mi'kmaq in Nova Scotia are under 25 years of age — and that number is growing," Dexter said. "The new generation can be part of stronger communities and a stronger provincial economy. We need to work together to ensure young aboriginal people have the knowledge and skills to participate in the workforce."

Program supports new breastfeeding moms

HEALTH The province announced Thursday a new campaign designed to help and support new moms through the first six weeks of breastfeeding, considered the toughest stretch for those choosing the method to feed their babies.

The campaign titled Breastfeeding: Learning Makes It Natural was launched at an afternoon news conference in Spryfield Thursday, which was also the first day of World Breastfeeding Week.

A government release says research shows mothers often don't feel prepared about breastfeeding, and are in need of more support and help.

The new program is "to show the successes and challenges associated with breastfeeding in an honest and realistic way," the release said. The program includes television, print and online advertisements, and a new website at first6weeks.ca.

Workforce warning for N.S.

Province could face labour shortage within seven years, report says

PAUL MCLEOD

paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

Raising the retirement age and universal daycare could be among the drastic steps governments will have to take to deal with an aging workforce, says a Dalhousie University professor.

Nova Scotia could also face a workforce shortage crisis in less than seven years, according to a population report by Dal's Jim McNiven, who spoke Thursday to the Halifax Chamber of Commerce, which released the 15-page report.

"You're going to find that from all the businesses. They're going to start finding that they can't find the people that they need. And that can be anything from the janitor up to the CEO," McNiven said.

He stated it's the result of decades of birth rates meeting only two of every three needed replacements. Mc-

A pedestrian crosses over Barrington Street during the afternoon rush hour on Thursday. A new report suggests Nova Scotia is facing a crisis if it doesn't make changes to replace its aging workforce.

Niven said women he polled were worried it would sacrifice their careers to take multiple years off to raise children.

To reverse the tide he said universal daycare starting at the age of two might be necessary.

"If you don't do something like that you've got to assume our birth rates will remain low or go even lower," he said. "Which do you want? It's a choice."

As for avoiding a massive economic stall, McNiven said there are three options — increasing immigration, people staying in the workforce longer and increasing productivity.

He said none of those strategies on their own can fill the gap. As an example he said having everyone work into their 70s would not fix the problem.

"We've only got three directions we can go," he said. "The only sensible thing is a mix."

In particular he stressed the need to move quickly. He said the slide has already begun but it's being masked by the recession. He said the low unemployment rate and businesses still hiring are out of whack with normal recession cycles.

"Usually you've got line-ups of people looking for any job they can find. I don't see that this time," he said.

College eyes plan for growth

WAIT LIST The Nova Scotia Community College says it is developing a master growth plan to address climbing waiting lists for students looking to take programs.

The NSCC issued a release Thursday, saying that for this academic year, 10,433 students are enrolled in certificate or diploma programs, with another 2,500 "qualified students" unable to access programs due to limited capacity.

The release says that's a 25 per cent increase over last year. Wait lists are growing even though the college is serving another 526 students this year through a one-time funded program designed to meet specific employer needs, the report said.

Don Bureaux, vice-president of academic for NSCC, said the college is going to keep working with their "funding partners to expand enrolment capacity to meet labour market demands."

Neptune Theatre suffered from the slumping economy and box office last year, but still turned a $73,000 surplus, the theatre's general manager told those in attendance at Thursday's annual general meeting.

That's the ninth straight year the organization has run in the black.

"We changed from an organization that was experiencing very strong growth to one in which our expectations became more modest," said Neptune general manager Doreen Malone.

years, our subscriber base declined, we didn't have a summer extension (for The Producers) and we had a couple of fairly large shortfalls at the box office," she explained. "In October, when the stock market plummeted, our customers seemed to go into hibernation for about two months."

Slow sales in the fall were partially offset by the blockbuster performance of High School Musical, which set a one-day record for sales. Skin Flick and Ubuntu also performed strongly. Government and sponsors kicked in cash, too.

Malone called it a "transitional year," noting that artistic director Ron Ulrich left Neptune last year to be replaced by George Pothitos.

Pothitos is currently directing Neptune's 47th season opener, The Game of Love and Chance.

Cape Breton working on sustainability plan

COMMITTEE Six councillors, the chief administrative officer and two senior staff will comprise a committee that will draft a plan for sustainability in the Cape Breton Regional Municipality.

During a special council meeting this week, 15 councillors voted in favour of creating the committee, two weeks after those same councillors rejected a staff-written report that included plans for regional self-governance.

Only Mayor John Morgan dismissed the idea, while Coun. Jim MacLeod was absent for a medical appointment.

"The issue is not creating plans, we have all the plans," said Morgan, following the meeting. "The issue really is a distraction and attempt to really whitewash what is going on in the community."

"Unfortunately what has happened is year after year, of government after government, this community has been victimized by a provincial government and a provincial bureaucracy."

Marginal and incremental changes will not impact the region's future, as they often require approval from the province, said Morgan. Instead he suggested "dramatic changes" as necessary.

Bishop case highlights statutes

The arrest of a Catholic bishop on child-pornography charges highlights the power of border agents to see not just your passport, but the contents of your laptop computer.

Between them, the Canada Border Services Agency and the RCMP enforce dozens of statutes — the border agency at various ports and crossings, the Mounties between ports of entry.

The Customs Act gives Canada's border officers authority to examine people's personal baggage and goods upon arrival to, and departure from, Canada, including scrutiny of electronic devices.

"Officers are trained to search electronic media for child pornography, obscene material and hate propaganda," said Patrizia Giolti of the border service agency.

'Evil' captor raped Smart repeatedly, court hears

Taking the stand for the first time since she was snatched from her girlhood bedroom seven years ago, Elizabeth Smart testified Thursday that her captor raped her three or four times a day, kept her tied up with a cable around her leg, and threatened to kill her if she tried to escape.

Asked by a prosecutor to describe Brian David Mitchell, the self-described prophet accused of holding her captive for nine months, Smart replied: "Evil, wicked, manipulative, stinky, slimy, greedy, selfish, not spiritual, not religious, not close to God."

Smart, now a 21-year-old college student, gave her horrifying account in federal court as part of a proceeding over whether Mitchell is mentally competent to stand trial.

The 55-year-old one-time street preacher has been behind bars since 2003 — mostly in a state mental hospital — but has yet to stand trial. Twice he has been ruled mentally incompetent in state court.

Death toll in Indonesia expected to top 1,100

QUAKE Rescue workers pulled victims, some screaming in pain, from the heavy rubble of buildings felled by a powerful earthquake that a government official said killed at least 777 people. The UN put the death toll at 1,100 and said it was likely to rise.

The brunt of Wednesday's 7.6-magnitude earthquake, which originated in the sea off Sumatra island, appeared to have been borne by the city of Padang, where a government official said most of the deaths occurred.

The region was jolted by another powerful earthquake Thursday morning, causing damage but no reported fatalities.

More than 500 buildings including hotels, schools, hospitals and a mall were destroyed or damaged in Padang. Thousands of people were still believed to be trapped in the rubble.

The government official told The Associated Press that at least 777 people are confirmed to have died in the quake, with about 440 seriously injured.

Cheney, FBI interview will go public: Judge

A federal judge ruled Thursday that the FBI must publicly reveal much of its notes from an interview with former U.S. vice-president Dick Cheney during the investigation into who leaked the identity of a CIA operative.

Cheney agreed to be interviewed by Special Counsel Patrick Fitzgerald in June 2004 during the investigation of the leak of Valerie Plame's identity after her husband publicly criticized the Bush administration. Both the Bush and Obama administrations said they wanted to keep the interview confidential because future presidents, vice-presidents and their senior staff may not cooperate with criminal investigations if they know what they say could become public.

But U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan ruled there was no justification to withhold the entire 67 pages of FBI records documenting Fitzgerald's interview since the Plame leak investigation has concluded.

He said that limited parts could be withheld to protect national security and private communications between the president and vice-president.

The U.S. Justice Department told Sullivan in a hearing this summer that if he ordered the documents released, they would appeal and seek to withhold them until the matter is resolved.

The Justice Department declined to comment on the ruling Thursday.

Internet trend shocks

InStep

Christine Williams

A disturbing Internet trend called "reaction videos" is exploding in youth popularity. Here's how it works: A person's reaction is recorded while watching some other shocking video of which he/she is oblivious about and then posted on the web.

Reaction is intense, from crying and gagging to rolling on the floor. So no wonder they're popular. The big deal is if you decide to look into what these youngsters are actually looking at to generate such intense feedback.

At least two of these shocking videos have gone viral in popularity. So I opted to do a little research without watching any of them. One was an unedited video leak of the gruesome slaying of an Eastern European man hammered to death and stabbed by some youth. This was a hard-working village man with throat cancer who struggled to support his wife, two sons, one grandchild and a disabled mom. The other viral video showed a trailer of two girls indulging in grotesque pornographic acts of coprophagia.

I was perplexed as to why any person would be driven to watch this stuff or show it to anyone. One youngster showed the pornographic trailer to her unsuspecting grandmother, who retorted in horror that her granddaughter needed help.

Author Anthony Burgess may not have been off track when he wrote his disturbing, futuristic novel A Clockwork Orange in 1962 about a youth gang who rapes, tortures and murders for entertainment. The deadly words "snuffed it" were repeatedly used in this book, bringing to mind snuff films of which one of the sordid viral videos actually was.

When Stanley Kubrick turned A Clockwork Orange into a movie in 1971,

it earned him more than four Oscar nominations: Controversy exploded in England over copycat crimes, which led Kubrick to withdraw his own film from the U.K.

That was then. Now our children are watching real snuff. Although we know copycat crimes are generally committed by those with a history of violence and severe mental disturbance, why create a milieu for such pathologies to flourish?

It's time for all of us to appeal to the timeless conscience within us amid the evolutionary changes of our modern virtual world. If, collectively, we are in danger of losing our conscience along the frantic highway of life, then I can't think of a better reason to risk pulling off to the shoulder and recouping this valuable possession.

Questions may answer future of health care

UrbanCompass

Stephen Kimber

This week's revelation that our on-its-way-out turn-on-the-taps Tory government renewed a controversial contract with Scotia Surgery in early June — just six days before voters shoved it onto the political trash heap — was ... well, interesting. But not surprising.

Perhaps more telling was Health Minister Maureen MacDonald's response.

"They're entitled to sign contracts right up to the day they're no longer the government," she blandly told reporters this week, adding with Zen-like detachment: "Things that have already happened, I have to learn to accept and move on, and focus on what it is I need to do."

You could almost smell the relief in her words. In March 2008, then-Conservative health minister Chris d'Entremont announced a one-year, $1-million "demonstration" project to reduce then 18- to 24-month wait times for orthopedic surgery. Under the arrangement, privately owned Scotia Surgery was to perform more than 500 minor procedures at its Dartmouth clinic in order to free time and space in Capital Health operating rooms for more complex cases.

Then-opposition leader Darrell Dexter harumphed: "This is being billed as innovative reform, but in fact there's nothing new and nothing innovative about this whatsoever."

He called it "a million-dollar quick fix ... taking money out of the public system and putting it into a private facility," and added: "This is really about the larger question of public policy, and is it the direction that we want health care in this province to go in?"

Pre-premier Dexter was right. But the problem for now-Premier Dexter is — at least as a quick fix — this one appears to be working. For starters, Scotia Surgery, unlike many private clinics, operates in concert with the public system. No one gets to jump the queue simply because they can afford to pay. And the clinic's patients, concedes MacDonald, are satisfied with the service. Given those realities, it would have been tricky for the new NDP government to have simply cancelled the contract after it took office in June.

The Tories took them off that hook. But Dexter's larger question remains: Will this quick fix work for the long term?

What are the pluses — and minuses — of using private clinics to deliver public services? And is this really the direction in which we want the public health-care system to go?

Before Scotia Surgery's oh-so-convenient contract extension comes up for renewal seven months from now, our new government will need to answer those questions.

Stephen Kimber, the Rogers Communications Chair in Journalism at the University of Kings College, is the author of eight books.

Worth mentioning

Banned Books Week marked by live readings

The Grapes Of Wrath was labelled vulgar and pornographic, a dangerous depiction of class hatred. I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings was removed from classrooms and library shelves after its 1969 publication, deemed inappropriate for its depiction of author Maya Angelou's rape as an eight-year-old girl.

Then there's Slaughterhouse Five, whose obscenities, violence and unpatriotic portrayal of the Second World War drew fire from worried parents and librarians.

Once silenced, the books were among more than a dozen given live readings this week as part of a series of events marking Banned Books

Week, an annual celebration by the American Library Association.

Banning books or censoring their authors has been practised since the dawn of the printing press and before, and continues today.

"We're certainly seeing increased efforts to remove or restrict books that are aimed for young adults," said Deborah Caldwell-

Stone, acting director of ALA's office for intellectual freedom. "There are parents who believe that young people under 18 shouldn't be having access to books that discuss sex or drug use, or homosexuality, and we understand that."

Stocks slide on weak numbers

North American stock markets kicked off fourth-quarter trading with a bad stumble Thursday as the latest batch of American economic data revived doubts about the strength of an economic rebound.

The S&P/TSX composite index was hit particularly hard by a sharp selloff in the mining and energy sectors and tumbled 323.2 points or 2.84 per cent to 11,071.76.

New York's Dow Jones industrials dropped 203 points or 2.09 per cent to 9,509.28 after the Institute for Supply Management reported that its September index for the U.S. manufacturing sector fell to 52.6 from 52.9 in August, sharply lower than the 54 reading that economists had expected.

It was the second dismal report on U.S. manufacturing in as many days. The Chicago Purchasing Managers Index, a snapshot of American manufacturing in the Midwest, slipped back into contraction in September.

The drop in the ISM manufacturing index ended eight straight months of gains. But analysts pointed out that at least the sector was still well above 50, which still signals growth.

Ford, Hyundai's Canadian September sales rise

AUTO September auto sales shrunk by only 3.5 per cent compared to a year ago, a much smaller decline than recent months as sales incentives and a general improvement in the economic climate provided a boost.

Ford and Hyundai emerged as the two clear winners among the major automakers, while General Motors, Chrysler, Honda and Toyota continued to see their sales shrink.

Ford Canada's September sales increased by 24.4 per cent compared to a year earlier to 16,140.

'What else can we give?'

Strong effort not enough, as Mooseheads drop to 0-7

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

It doesn't seem to matter how much the Halifax Mooseheads do right, their season just keeps going wrong.

The Mooseheads got their offence going and put in a spirited, hard-working effort but remained winless seven games into the QMJHL season with a 4-3 loss to the Rimouski Oceanic before an all-time low crowd of 4,340 at the Metro Centre.

For the fourth time this season, the Mooseheads were tied in the third period but were not able to get so much as a point, surrendering the winning goal to Rimouski's Petr Straka on the power play 5:42 into the frame.

But coming close is no comfort for the last-place club.

"It's frustrating ... After we lose, we wonder, 'What else can we give? What else can we do?'" said Mooseheads assistant captain Travis Randell. "But you've got to battle through and eventually things have to turn around. They just have to."

Patrice Cormier scored twice in the final 64 seconds of the second period to put the Oceanic up 3-1. But Halifax didn't roll over, getting goals from Randell and Steve Gillard in a 37-second span on two-man power plays early in the third.

Straka eventually stemmed the tide after a rebound from a point shot bounced right to him in front.

The Mooseheads had 19 shots in the third period — and 39 on the night — as they pushed desperately on a pair of power plays in the final 10 minutes and with the extra attacker.

"We had some great power plays, great scoring opportunities, guys in front of the net, scrambles in front," Randell said. "Things aren't going our way right now, but it'll change."

Rookie forward Carl

Gelinas also scored and freshman goaltender Joel Grondin turned aside 31 shots.

It doesn't get easier from here. Halifax hits the road for eight of its next nine games starting against the Val-d'Or Foreurs on Saturday and the Rouyn-Noranda Huskies on Sunday.

"It's going to be good for us," said Mooseheads defenceman Alexandre Brunet. "It's the right time to go on the road. We have to forget about the pressure and just win."

Rainmen add former NBA pick at centre

matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

The Halifax Rainmen have finally landed a big man.

The Rainmen announced the signing of six-foot-11 former Minnesota Timberwolves draft choice Gordon Malone yesterday and moved a step closer to finalizing their starting lineup for the 2010 Premier Basketball League season.

The 35-year-old was an NCAA Division I standout in 1996-97 at West Virginia and was picked 44th overall by the Timberwolves in 1997 but never played in the NBA.

The Rainmen have been searching for a legitimate starting centre for the better part of their two seasons.

"He runs the floor extremely well, he's athletic, he can score with his back to the basket, he rebounds well and he's a good defender," said Rainmen owner Andre Levingston. "He's going to cause a lot of problems for a lot of teams."

"He runs the floor extremely well, he's athletic, he can score with his back to the basket, he rebounds well and he's a good defender."

Andre Levingston

"He's going to make his presence felt immediately."

Malone is expected to start along with the big three of Tony Bennett, Jason McLeish and Desmond Ferguson. Projected returnee Eric Crookshank could also start.

Levingston called Malone an "NBA talent."

Malone's last pro stop was in 2007-08 with the American Basketball Association's Strong Island Sound.

He has also played for the Harlem Globetrotters and had stops in the Continental Basketball Association, Argentina and China.

Huskies kicker closing in on records

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

Right place at the right time? OK, fine. But talent has a little something to do with Justin Palardy's ascent to the top of the Atlantic University Sport record books, too.

The Saint Mary's Huskies kicker is edging closer to setting the AUS record for career field goals and could tie Jadran Minarevic's 23-year-old record of 56 with four more in Friday's 7 p.m. home game against the Mount Allison Mounties.

Palardy hasn't missed a single game since earning

"I've played every game since I got here. I'm just consistently doing my job ... And it all adds up, right?"

Justin Palardy

the Huskies' starting kicking job in his freshman season.

"I've played every game since I got here," said Palardy, a Truro native and two-time conference all-star. "I'm just consistently doing my job ... And it all adds up, right?"

Palardy is 52-of-69 in his career and boasts a success rate of better than 75 per cent. Inside 40 yards, he's a deadly 46-of-57 and from 50 yards and beyond, he's 6-of-16.

While Palardy is humble about his success, he won his job as a freshman over a proven Canadian Interuniversity Sport talent in Steve Wozimirsky and has maintained that spot by working hard and delivering consistent results.

"You've got to have a long career to achieve those things, but you also have to have to be good or you won't have a long career," said Huskies head coach Steve Sumarah.

Palardy's goal is to play in the Canadian Football League, but he plans to return to the Huskies for a fifth season. If he does, he's within reasonable striking distance of Frank Jagas' 13-year-old CIS record of 70 career field goals.

It's quite a thrill for the longtime Huskies fan.

"I used to run home Friday afternoons after high school practice to watch them on EastLink," he recalled. "Now I'm playing for them and now I'm closing in on a couple of records."

"It's pretty awesome."

Habs beat Leafs in OT

NHL RESULT

Montreal 4 Toronto 3 (OT)

Even though a few of the newest Montreal Canadiens provided some optimism on opening night, it was a standout performance by a much-maligned holdover that had everyone raving.

Carey Price delivered a pretty strong statement after enduring an off-season of questions about his play, stopping 43 shots in Montreal's 4-3 overtime victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs on Thursday night.

The last time Habs fans had seen the young goaltender in a meaningful game, he was gesturing to them while getting booed on home ice during a first-round playoff loss to Boston. As a new season dawned, Price was the only reason Montreal was able to pull out an unlikely victory.

"He was unbelievable," said defenceman Josh Gorges, who scored the overtime winner with 12.8

BASEBALL The American League Central showdown didn't decide much.

Scott Baker had a strong start and got plenty of run, helping the Minnesota Twins beat the Detroit Tigers 8-3 Thursday to avoid elimination from playoff contention.

The AL Central-leading Tigers had a chance to clinch their first division title since 1987 in the finale of the four-game series. But their bats were quieted and their pitchers got roughed up in a three-run third inning and a four-run eighth.

Evans brings edge to Raptors

NBA On a team that had been lacking toughness, it doesn't get much tougher than Reggie Evans.

Three days into training camp, his new Toronto Raptors teammates have the bumps, bruises and scratches to prove it.

"A guy like that, if you're not playing as hard as you need to, you're probably going to get hurt, to put it quite frankly," said Raptors all-star forward Chris Bosh. "You're going to get an elbow or something because he's going to play hard, and if you're really lagging and not playing hard, bad things happen. He makes you elevate your game."

The Raptors traded sharpshooter Jason Kapono to Philadelphia in the off-season for Evans to inject some grit into a lineup that had little, and the 29-year-old's hard-nosed style is already rubbing off on his teammates.

Evans' new teammates haven't let him off easy either, and that's a good thing for a guy who doesn't mind the rough stuff.

Reggie Evans, shown here with the Philadelphia 76ers last year battling for the ball with Orlando's Marcin Gortat, has elbowed his new teammates into playing a tougher style.

"A lot of the guys are being really aggressive. Bargnani, he's going really strong and not complaining. Those are good signs," Evans said. "Players are coming back at me aggressive and I love that. It makes me better. I can't play with guys who are playing weak. They hit me really tough, they hit me with their shoulder, they push me in my back, so they're coming back at me. It's all love. I like it."

Great One escapes our expectations

Field of Play

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

Another NHL season dawns and the brightest light in hockey's history is nowhere on the horizon. Wayne Gretzky has had his fill of living up to our expectations of him. Who could blame him? What was once a joyful expression of his magical powers has become just another case file in a bankruptcy court.

How did this happen?

When Gretzky was an Edmonton Oiler no one played hockey with his intuition. He was a savant, the kind of ethereal being who knew how to make all the right things happen. He was a sorcerer on skates who captured our undying affection.

But Gretzky was sold to the Los Angeles Kings and became the rainmaker for an icy game in the dry sun belt of America. The expectation was that he could single handedly cultivate a Canadian obsession in a place where few knew or cared where Canada was.

This is where the Great One's powers began to elude him. The Kings never won the Stanley Cup and he moved on. Gretzky went to St. Louis and New York and eventually retired after a journey which included his ignominious exclusion from a shootout at the 1998 Olympics where he might have delivered Canada the gold medal.

But we expected that Gretzky could, like soccer's Pele, be an ambassadorial figure once his playing days were done. Wayne Gretzky, we thought, could be hockey's wise sage.

It hasn't turned out that way yet.

Like many gifted artists, he became convinced that his abilities could be transferred from his palate, in this case the ice, to the boardrooms and eventually behind the bench.

Gretzky did help Canada to a gold medal at the 2002 Olympics but the players like Iginla, Sakic and Lemieux were the ones who really made it happen.

And then he failed miserably as the coach of the Phoenix Coyotes. We unfairly expected him to be great in that role too — a common mistake because rarely do great players make great teachers. It's a vastly different skill set.

So once again Wayne Gretzky is gone from centre ice. His reasons are probably numerous and complex, but one has to believe he's dog-tired of trying to live up to our expectations of him.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

TICKET PRICES The New York Mets are cutting the average price of season tickets by at least 10 per cent following a dismal opening season at Citi Field. The team said Thursday some locations will have cuts of more than 20 per cent. All season tickets will go down in price. Picked by some to reach the World Series, the Mets were devastated by injuries and head into the final weekend of the season with a 67-92 record.

SKIING Swiss skier Didier Defago suffered a broken right thumb Thursday and is expected to miss the opening race of the World Cup season. Defago fell during a downhill training run and was scheduled to undergo surgery later Thursday.

BUSINESS Nike says it does not have a "contractual relationship" with Michael Vick, a day after the quarterback's agent announced a deal with the manufacturer. In a statement released Thursday, Nike says it has "agreed to supply product to Michael Vick as we do a number of athletes who are not under contract with Nike."

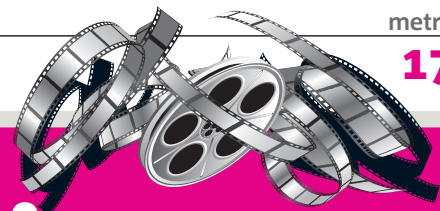

MARATHON World record holder Paula Radcliffe will defend her title at the New York City Marathon next month. The British runner won the New York City Half-Marathon in August, but skipped the world championships because she needed more time to recover from foot surgery in March.

SOCCER Prosecutors in Turin are seeking a three-year sentence for former Juventus executive Luciano Moggi for alleged false bookkeeping. He denies the charges. Moggi was the central figure in a match-fixing scandal that shook Italian soccer in 2006.

Perfect mix of horror, humour

Zombieland

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

With its slow motion tableaux of marauding, gore-caked ghouls running down hapless victims to the timeless battering of Metallica's For Whom the Bell Tolls, Zombieland's opening credits sequence is perhaps one of the best in the history of pulp cinema.

The fact that the film actually lives up to much of that promise is exhilaratingly happy news to report.

This wild, messy and downright hilarious comedy-shocker understands that to blend humour and horror properly, you have to allow the terror to be real and simply allow the characters to react to it.

Zombieland does it smashingly, offering tons of outrageously bloody attacks juxtaposed with a central boy-meets-girl story that's as urgent as anything John Hughes penned in his prime.

In a world gone mad, eternally nerdy Columbus (Jason Eisenberg) has learned to survive based on a series of self-made rules, the likes of which are playfully illustrated (complete with heaving, on screen text) throughout the film's running time.

While battling his way across the living dead littered landscape, he meets leather-clad tough guy Tallahassee (Woody Harrelson, miming Clint Eastwood and John Wayne outlaw clichés to grand effect), a sexy teenage drifter (Emma Stone) and her bratty 12-year-old sister (Abigail Breslin).

As the motley crew drives their stolen Hummer east toward an abandoned theme park that's supposedly zombie free, people are double-crossed, many cannibal corpses are dispatched in disgusting ways and sweaty-palmed love blossoms.

Lots of critics are lazily comparing this to Simon Pegg's U.K. zom-com Shaun of the Dead, but outside of the zombie apocalypse angle, the two pics couldn't be more different.

Shaun was never scary and treated its zombies as slapstick fodder but in Zombieland, the walking (and running, and sprinting) dead are truly terrifying and never the source of cheap amusement.

Tight, taught, relentlessly violent and gory but never nihilistic or depressing, Zombieland is 82 minutes of concentrated, sick, cinema bravado, a flesh-eating, knee-slapping and nail-biting good time.

Invention funny

The Invention of Lying

Director: Ricky Gervais, Matthew Robinson

Stars: Ricky Gervais, Jennifer Garner, Rob Lowe

Classification: PG

Rating: ****

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Ricky Gervais stars in The Invention of Lying.

No one makes awkward discomfort as painfully hilarious as Ricky Gervais. His work in The Office and Extras has made him a comedy icon, but his alienatingly realistic comedic voice has also made him a tough sell in Hollywood.

However he's too big a star for them to ignore, so Gervais has managed to sneak into Hollywood with a pair of high concept comedies: Last year's sadly underrated Ghost Town and now The Invention of Lying.

Both are hysterical and give Ricky Gervais a chance to show off his chops to a wider audience, even if they don't quite represent the self-titled little fat man with the pug-nosed face at his best.

The Invention of Lying is ingeniously simple concept created by unknown screenwriter Matthew Robinson who enlisted Ricky Gervais as close collaborator.

The film takes place in a world in which humanity hasn't developed the ability to lie (e.g., commercials involve company employees begging you to use their products).

Then a sadsack Ricky Gervais comes along and invents lying. Suddenly he's able to do anything because no one doubts his lies. It all leads to a satirical religious allegory when Gervais invents the concept of "the man in the sky" as a deathbed comfort and becomes an accidental messiah.

The movie is silly fun with a brain, populated with a cast Hollywood stars anxious to work with Gervais (including Jennifer Garner, Tina Fey, Christopher Guest, Edward Norton and more).

The concept is smart, the laughs are unrelenting, and writers actually have something to say beyond the jokes. In short, the film is about as good as mainstream Hollywood comedy gets.

Halifax Regional Fire & Emergency's 2009 Fire Prevention Week theme is aimed at reducing the number of fires associated with, or caused by, the inappropriate use of matches & lighters.

Residents of HRM who use matches & lighters need to take responsibility for them. Matches and lighters are tools, and should be respected as such. With children in the home, most of us are very careful not to leave dangerous tools lying around where children could find them and cause themselves harm. Yet, statistics show that this same practice is not being extended to safety with matches & lighters even though we know that matches & lighters, in the wrong hands, can be even more dangerous.

Respect for fire should be passed down from parents to children—generation to generation. Teaching youth to respect fire, and to be extremely cautious when using matches & lighters, should be a high priority in any home where youth reside.

Capitalism best, worst of Moore

Capitalism: A Love Story

Director: Michael Moore

Classification: STC

Rating: ●●●●

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Professional agitator
Michael Moore is back with his patented brand of satirical documentary. Moore has been cinema's biggest anti-business advocate for 20 years and today his reheated opinions are more relevant than ever.

Moore's rallying cries against corporate America's undying greed and the potential collapse of the U.S. economy have proven to be frighteningly true over the last year and no one was more qualified to make a film about the current recession. Of course, it's still Michael Moore, and his heavily opinionated approach will irritate everyone who has dismissed him before.

Like all of his previous work, Capitalism: A Love Story offers audiences an episodic analysis of his chosen subject.

Moore combines disturbing footage of families forced out of their homes (in one case even paid to destroy their own belongings), interviews with depressed victims (including a woman who discovered her husband's employer cashed a massive insurance settlement after his death, but shared none of it with the family), comedic stunts, ironic stock footage, and plenty of voiceover to paint a disturbing picture of the current economic climate. It's easy to criticize the film for being scattershot and heavily opinionated, but that seems unfair. All documentaries present the filmmaker's point of view (as soon as you bring a camera into a room, you change the situation) and at least Moore is honest about it.

Michael Moore brings his brand of heavily opinionated documentary-making to Capitalism: A Love Story.

His movies are cinematic essays exploring specific issues and the techniques he's most heavily criticized for are always accepted in the printed word.

Capitalism: A Love Story is far from perfect. As a filmmaker Michael Moore is undeniably indulgent and self-aggrandizing, but that's just to be expected at this point.

The bottomline is that he was able to take a fairly dry economic analysis and transform it into a movie that is hilarious, compelling, entertaining, touching and vital.

Given the depressed state of the global economy, someone had to make a movie about it and no one could have done it better.

Halifax native Ellen Page stars in Whip It.

Whip It unconventional, affable

Whip It

Director: Drew Barrymore

Stars: Ellen Page, Kristen Wiig

Classification: PG

Rating: ●●●●

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Drew Barrymore's affable directorial debut features Ellen Page as Bliss, a small-town Texas girl whose path to self-actualization takes the form of a roller-derby track.

The character of the snarky non-conformist yearning to escape her backwater environment is, of course, a cliché, but Whip It finds other ways to be unconventional. While Barrymore clearly identifies with her heroine's frustration, she refuses to condescend to Bliss' protective, beauty-pageant-advocating mother, played by Marcia Gay Harden not as a dreamstifling harpy but a sharp, sympathetic woman acting with her offspring's best interest in mind.

From this empathetic, even-handed starting point, Whip It skates briskly through its crowd-pleasing paces. Page is less mannered than usual, and Kristen Wiig, Juliette Lewis and Barrymore herself contribute vivid, funny turns as the veteran skater girls who teach her the tricks of the trade.

Barrymore has chosen her technical collaborators well, especially editor Dylan Tichenor. And she's got an ear for good — as opposed to really irritating — pop music: The hipster-friendly soundtrack peaks with the use of Jens Lekman's ecstatic Your Arms Around Me over top of what may be the fall's sexiest love scene.

'I am the worst giggler': Akerman

Actress gets her laughs in Couples Retreat

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Malin Akerman split her childhood between Toronto and Sweden before becoming a model at 17, which eventually led to a career in acting.

Akerman's profile has been steadily rising with high profile roles in films like The Heartbreak Kid and Watchmen. She has split her time between comedies and drama, which the young actress relishes.

"I don't have a preference to be honest with you. Comedy and drama are so different and I enjoy doing everything as an actor," Akerman told Metro. "As long as it's a challenge, I'll try it all. Bring it on."

Akerman's latest venture is a project from Vince Vaughn and Jon Favreau (who burst onto the screen with Swingers in 1996). The pair co-wrote and star in Couples Retreat, a comedy about a group of married couples who embark on a tropical vacation only to unwittingly end up in a weeklong series of skill-building exercises and therapy sessions.

For Akerman the film was an opportunity to work with two comic minds that she has long admired.

"I heard that there was a film being made with Vince Vaughn and I knew that they were looking for their girls," said Akerman. "I got my hands on the script and thought it was a really great concept."

Beyond the tropical location there was still a film to be made and one starring some pretty sharp comic minds. This led to a great deal of improvisation on set, which Akerman enjoys.

"I've always liked improv. I think as long as you know your character and your goal in the scene, improv is easy. Especially when you're working with masters like Vince Vaughn or Jon Favreau. Once they start going at it, you just want to sit back and enjoy the show."

Of course, not knowing what those actors would say caused another challenge for the actress.

The Resistance grows

New album from U.K.'s Muse tops charts in 15 countries

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

When Christopher Wolstenholme answers the phone, he's noticeably excited. Muse's bassist just found out that his group's new album, The Resistance, topped the charts in 15 countries, including Canada.

"This was totally unexpected," he says, still shocked by the news.

Hitting number one in so many places is a challenge for any band, but for Muse, whose epic blend of grand guitars and over-the-top electronics isn't the most mainstream stuff, it's been even more difficult.

Wolstenholme thinks that people finally understand the band. "A lot of people who listened to our past albums felt there was too much on them and they went in many different directions," he reveals. "But people know what they're getting now."

And what they're getting is even more outlandish this time around. While the album is mostly filled with complex keys, soaring Bono-like vocals and chugging riffs, the last three tracks are, literally, a symphony.

Titled Exogenesis, this three-part song collection sounds like a sci-fi symphony, complete with strings, piano and weird electro sounds. It's surprisingly infectious — lead singer Matthew Bellamy sounds like a cross between Roger Waters and Thom Yorke — and while it's definitely grand, it's not as bloated as you might think.

"Initially I was like, 'What is this,'" says Wolstenholme. "It wasn't until the end that I understood what we were doing. It was up to us to trust that Matt had a vision for it. But it turned out great — it's sometimes the stuff that's more challenging that works the best."

Part of the bassist's skepticism likely came from the fact that this wasn't a song meant for a band. Wolstenholme says that while they've used strings before, if you took the extra instruments away the tracks could always be played as a three-piece.

"It wasn't like that with the symphony," he explains. "The band is almost secondary — you can take us away and the song would still work."

Besides being ambitious with their music, the band's lyrics are some of the most intriguing of their career. Themes include political change, constitutional reform, and revolution. There's also a love story running through the disc.

The tracks aren't preachy, but Wolstenholme admits it's impossible not to be influenced by politics.

"With 24 hour news channels, it's hard to avoid political images," he says. "But the way Matt played it this time was as an emotional response to political events rather than being political. On the last album the songs were more direct."

With their messages in

tow, the band is about to embark on a lengthy tour that'll take them around the world. But now that they're topping charts all over the place it seems they'll have to add a few more places to their itinerary.

"I'm excited to go to Australia," he says. "The weather is great."

illScarlett is up to the task

Ska-punk quartet finally realizes maximum potential on fourth album 1UP

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

We've all heard that old axiom relating the blessed moment when everything comes together perfectly, creating a sense of cohesion or success. It's usually referred to as how the third time is a charm.

Such isn't always the case though. In regards to Mississauga-based ska/punk quartet illScarlett, it took a little bit longer than a tertiary kick at the can to find that sweet spot where intent meets ability. While never at a complete loss or hampered by lack of aptitude, the band feels that over the past eight years and three albums, they've had to continually hone their craft until finally realizing maximum potential with fourth full-length 1UP (Sony Music) released earlier this week.

"This album is really a point of pride," beams vocalist and guitarist Alex Norman moments after jetting back in the midst of a U.S. tour to perform for a packed hometown crowd on 1UP's official street date. "While we still love our other albums, this one really has our fingerprints all over it."

Keen to utilize another adage, Norman refers to 1UP as illScarlett's "baby," a comment not altogether unheard of from any artist releasing their blood, sweat and tears unto the world for whatever praise and/or criticism it generates.

Yet he quickly notes that the band — completed by guitarist Will Marr, drummer Swavek Piorkowski and bassist John Doherty — is still very pleased with their past releases. 2007's All Day With It did reach Gold sales status in Cana-

we've been able to represent who we truly are on our own terms," Norman continues. "We took a full three months off to write and record this one. I'd say we actually got to create it, where our other records were made in the middle of playing, touring and whatever. Because we were so interactive (1UP), it was a lot of fun and I think that reflects on how it comes across."

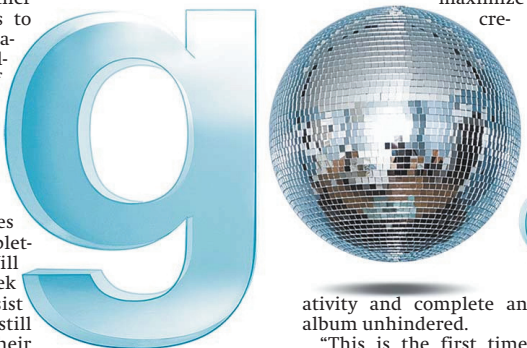

At that, Norman is quite direct about exactly how he expects listeners to perceive the band's inherent mix of ska's upbeat, pleasant atmosphere with the expediency of punk rock's pacing on 1UP. He goes so far as to offer some insight on why the album's 12 tracks have a decidedly sharper feel this time around, something he anticipates will direct listeners' immediate comfort with it.

"It's raw," he declares with finality. "It's live. Some songs aren't perfect. There might be a moment where the tuning or the timing is off. That's because we didn't want to lose that human element; that feel. We didn't drive for perfection or stew on it because music is meant to be fun. We weren't so uptight about it. We had fun; were more comfortable instead of putting everything under a microscope. I think albums are more enjoyable when they're natural."

Nick Cave sprawls out on the leather couch in my office in his bespoke Savile Row suit. Sans the moustache, he looks a lot less intimidating than I thought he would. I can relax a little.

Cave, the balladeer leader of the Birthday Party, the Bad Seeds and Grinderman, is also a prolific writer, having penned screenplays (including the rejected Gladiator II, which he wrote at the request of his friend, Russell Crowe), various essays and two novels. He's here to talk about the second one.

"(The Death of Bunny Munro) was a screenplay. John Hillcoat (Nick's director friend) wanted a small English film about a travelling salesman. So I went away with that and came back a couple of weeks later with a script — and it never got made. But I really loved the story, so I thought, 'Why not make it into a novel?'"

Bunny, our, er, hero, is a man of, um, appetites and, as Nick says, "pursues them with conviction." After his wife commits suicide whilst he's out philan-dering, Bunny plunges into even greater self-destruction while also trying to care for his nine-year-old son, the very brave Bunny Jr. Things do not go well. Everything is written in present tense to enhance Bunny's spiral towards his inevitable doom.

The story and its characters are profane and extremely funny (except maybe to Avril Lavigne; you'll have to read the book to understand why). The dialogue is something you might hear late at night from road-weary rock musicians on a tour bus. In fact, that's where much of the book was written, between shows on a Bad Seeds tour. The entire first chapter was written on an iPhone. Everything else was written in long-hand.

"The delete key is dangerous," Nick says. "I gave up writing on a computer altogether because of the delete key because I would write a song that I thought it was good. The next day I'd be in a bad mood and just ... delete. I've lost so much that way."

The book is also available as a fascinating iPhone app and a couple of audio books. The super-deluxe version not only features Nick reading the book but elaborate scoring and production. Listen to it on headphones in the dark and the 3-D effects are almost hallucinatory.

The Death of Bunny Munro (HarperCollins) is out now.

Michael Jackson

Jackson was in good health: autopsy report

Michael Jackson's arms were covered with punctures, his face and neck were scarred and he had tattooed eyebrows and lips, but he wasn't the sickly skeleton of a man portrayed by tabloids, according to his autopsy report obtained by The Associated Press.

In fact, the Los Angeles County coroner's report shows Jackson was a fairly healthy 50-year-old before he died of an overdose. His 136-pound weight was in the acceptable range for a 5-foot-9 man. His heart was strong with no sign of plaque buildup. And his kidneys and most other major organs were normal.

Still, Jackson had health issues: arthritis in the lower spine and some fingers, and mild plaque buildup in his leg arteries. Most seriously, he had chronic inflammation of his lungs and they had reduced capacity, which might have left him short of breath.

However, according to the document, the lung condition was not serious enough to be a direct or contributing cause of death.

"His overall health was fine," said Dr. Zeev Kain, chairman of the anesthesiology department at the University of California, Irvine, who reviewed a copy of the autopsy report for the AP. "The results are within normal limits."

Kain was not involved in the autopsy. The full autopsy report has not been released publicly.

Jackson died at his rented Los Angeles mansion June 25 after his personal physician, Dr. Conrad Murray, administered the anesthetic propofol and two other sedatives to get the insomniac to sleep, court documents state.

Propofol, normally a surgical anesthetic used in operating rooms, acts as a respiratory depressant and requires constant monitoring. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Curb your enthusiasm, it's not a real Seinfeld reunion

You know you want it. You may never have said out loud that you wanted a Seinfeld reunion but why would you, cool Seinfeld fan that you are? You know TV reunions are lame. You also know the Seinfeld gang is way too cool to stoop to doing one.

But now, Larry David has reunited his four Seinfeld stars for a sassy story line on his current series, Curb Your Enthusiasm.

He has recaptured the twisted genius of the old show and reignited it, fresh and funny and safely removed from any danger of lameness.

The made-for-TV version of himself that he portrays on his HBO comedy (a cavilling provocateur named Larry David, who formerly produced a show called Seinfeld) sets the plan in motion for a Seinfeld reunion on Sunday's episode of Curb.

"Honestly, and I know I can speak for Jerry, too, I can tell you that neither of us ever gave a moment's thought to doing it for real."

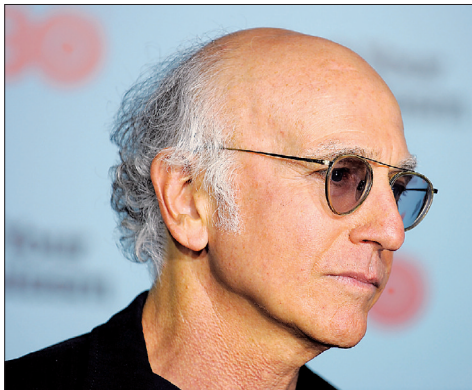

Larry David

But not before resisting. "You know those reunion shows, they're so lame," TV-Larry scoffs when the idea is first brought to him.

Then, befitting TV-Larry, when he eventually consents, it's not for any logical good reason.

His ulterior motive: To win back his estranged wife, Cheryl (Cheryl Hines). He means to cast her, a would-be actress, as the ex-wife of George the third episode in its triumphant seventh season — is a compact masterpiece.

Costanza (the character who, played by Jason Alexander, always served as David's Seinfeld dopelganger).

Granted, Pirandello would be easier to sort out than this double-helix of parody and truth. Doesn't matter. What matters is, this particular Curb —

It finesses a hilarious clash between David and the Seinfeld foursome (Alexander, Michael Richards, Julia Louis-Dreyfus and, of course, Jerry Seinfeld), reconvened 11 years after the Seinfeld finale with hilarious, organic aplomb.

"Why isn't it lame?"

says TV-Jerry when TV-Larry coaxes him to say yes.

"Because we'll do it in a way that won't be lame," vows TV-Larry, flush with his covert Cheryl-targeted agenda.

And he does! They do! They mount a real reunion within a mock reunion.

They wangle a way to have it both ways, for themselves and for the audience. How cool is that!

Larry and Company would never have done it under any other terms.

"Honestly, and I know I can speak for Jerry, too, I can tell you that neither of us ever gave a moment's thought to doing it for real," says David.

Prosecutor says he lied in Polanski doc

COURTS A former prosecutor says he made up a story he told a film crew about advising a judge handling Roman Polanski's sex case to send the director to prison.

In Roman Polanski: Wanted and Desired, David F. Wells is depicted as conferring with a trial judge more than 30 years ago about Polanski's case. Wells said in the documentary that the judge took his advice in deciding to renege on a plea bargain and give Polanski additional prison time.

"I made that up to make the stuff look better," Wells said.

He also said he overstated his actions after being told the film would air in France, not the United States. The film aired on HBO.

Wells' statement on the documentary later became part of the basis for a move by Polanski's attorneys to dismiss the case against the fugitive director, who was arrested in Switzerland on Saturday.

In France, several government officials who had initially rushed to Polanski's defence were being more cautious on Thursday, stressing that the filmmaker is not above the law.

Wells, who retired more than two years ago, did not handle Polanski's case but was assigned to the courtroom where it was heard and had frequent interactions with the now-deceased trial judge Laurence J. Rittenband.

"They interviewed me in the Malibu courthouse when I was still a DA, and I embellished a story," Wells said about the film crew in an interview with The Associated Press Wednesday. "I'm a guy who cuts to the chase — I lied. It embarrasses the hell of me."

Wells said he was sorry about making the comments for the documentary. "I cost the DA's office a lot of money and aggravation over this," Wells said.

Polanski was accused of plying a 13-year-old girl with champagne and part of a Quaalude during a modelling shoot in 1977 and raping her. He was initially indicted on six felony counts, including rape by use of drugs, child molesting and sodomy.

He pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of unlawful sexual intercourse; in exchange, the remaining charges were dropped, and the judge agreed to send Polanski to prison for a 90-day psychiatric evaluation. But Polanski was released after 42 days and fled the country for France before sentencing.

Heartland heartthrob is back in the saddle

B.C. actor learns to ride wave of popularity

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

HORSEPLAY Playing hunky stable boy Ty on CBC's horsey drama Heartland has added a new element to Graham Wardle's career: fan mail. And it's not just the usual preteen girls who are crushing on the young actor.

"It's pretty wide-ranging," says Wardle, 23, in a break from filming the ranch-based series in Alberta.

"I get emails from fans in their 20s. The ones in their 40s send large envelopes so you can send them back photos.

"And the six-year-olds like to draw pictures and make bracelets for you. It's definitely a new part of my life."

Wardle's growing heartthrob status will get a boost in Heartland's third

"The actors just have to get it right in a couple of takes, or the horses get bored."

Graham Wardle

season, which begins Sunday. Ty's ongoing romance with Amy (Amber Marshall) will heat up. However, this being a family series, Ty will still spend most of his nights bunking alone in the barn.

"They'll be together and working on the relationship in this season," says Wardle.

"But I'm not exactly sure what the writers have planned for them and how that whole sleeping-in-the-barn plays out."

A native of Mission, B.C., the young actor says that working with horses is really just a matter of being well prepared.

"The horses know what they are supposed to do. The actors just have to get it right in a couple of takes, or the horses get bored."

Wardle says he knew nothing about horses before taking on the role of Ty.

Fortunately, that unfamiliarity was just what the role called for.

"Ty was a city boy," he says. "So I got lucky. Unlike the other actors, I got to learn all about horses on camera."

He's a workaday kind of celebrity

Lou Diamond Phillips relishes his role in new Stargate

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

Lou Diamond Phillips says he's happy to be called a "working actor."

"I take it as a compliment," says Phillips, 47, whose current project is Stargate Universe, the latest spinoff of the popular sci-fi institution.

"I see myself as an employable actor who's comfortable working in every facet of the industry. That said, I also have four kids who continue to eat every day."

Phillips' recent credits include the movie Che, a touring stage production of Camelot, and the reality series I'm A Celebrity, Get Me Out of Here.

The new Stargate series is about a group of soldiers and scientists who find themselves lost in space on board an alien ship. Phillips plays Col. Telford, a no-nonsense soldier who proves a nemesis for the rest of the cast.

Don't blink, though: Phillips appears only briefly in the pilot.

"I think they call it a re-curing guest-star role. I kind of work my way into the show slowly over time," he says. "But I really love working with an ensemble like this. You can do great work in smaller doses. You still have time to have an actual life."

Phillips says his time on I'm A Celebrity, Get Me Out of Here, for which he camped in a Costa Rican jungle with a group including actor Stephen Baldwin and fashion fixture Janice Dickinson, was "as uncomfortable as it appeared on TV."

"Some people assumed we'd go back to the hotel every night, but it wasn't true," he says. "It was jungle, 24-7. I still have the scars from the bug bites."

Diamond cherished the chance to work with the late Patrick Swayze on his final series, The Beast. Swayze died last month of pancreatic cancer. "He was a real accomplished actor and a real man among men," says Phillips.

Stargate premieres tonight on Space

Phillips appears in Stargate Universe in the recurring role of Colonel Telford, who becomes a nemesis for the rest of the cast.

More LGBT roles on prime-time TV

OUT ON AIR The Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation says the number of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered characters on prime-time network TV is up slightly this season, to 18 out of a total 600 roles. According to the group, the increase this year fell short of the jump from 2007 to 2008, which represented more than a doubling of LGBT characters.

The 14th annual "Where We Are on TV" report, released Wednesday, found three per cent of actors appearing regularly on network drama and comedy series in 2009-10 will portray LGBT characters. That's up from 2.6 per cent in the 2008-09 season.

Only four of the 18 characters counted this season are non-white, and there is only one lesbian role, on ABC's Grey's Anatomy.

Little-known Da Vinci works displayed

Leonardo da Vinci once spent nearly two decades creating an eight-metre sculpture of a horse to honour a royal Italian family, only to have the plaster masterpiece destroyed by French soldiers.

The Italian artist best known for his paintings and inventions rather than sculpting abilities created more than a dozen sculptures in his lifetime, many of which have disappeared.

A rare U.S. exhibit of the remaining few and dozens of sketches by da Vinci and his contemporaries will open Tuesday at Atlanta's High Museum of Art, featuring art never seen outside of Europe.

The exhibit will remain in Atlanta until February, when a modified version will travel to the J. Paul Getty Museum in Los Angeles. It includes pieces from the Vatican's art collection, the Louvre in Paris and the royal collection at Windsor Castle in England.

"One of the marketing lines that fell on the cutting room floor was, 'Approved by the queen and blessed by the Pope,'" said the museum's deputy director, Philip Verre.

The centrepiece is a nearly nine-metre recreation of da Vinci's destroyed horse statue, which towers over the plaza outside the High. Inside the museum are the meticulous drawings and anatomical notes he made of the Sforza family's horses in hopes of perfectly capturing the animals' motion.

The exhibit also includes three pieces believed to have been sculpted in part by da Vinci, though his name was never put on any of them, said exhibit curator Gary Radke, a Syracuse University humanities professor. Those are a silver sculptured panel depicting the beheading of John the Baptist, a small bronze horse and a terracotta angel relief. "These are just drop-dead gorgeous," Radke said during a tour of the exhibit yesterday. See high.org for details. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WE SEE WHAT MOST DON'T

We see the heartbreaking effects of poverty, homelessness, abuse and addiction every day. Last year in Canada, The Salvation Army served 2.5 million meals to the hungry, helped 10,000 people with addictions and provided one third of all shelter beds each night. This Christmas we ask you to open your eyes and your heart. And give.

Twain to carry torch

Singer will bear Olympic torch through Timmins

Shania Twain will carry the Olympic torch through her northern Ontario hometown of Timmins.

The pop-country superstar says the honour "is certain to be one of the most memorable experiences of my life."

Twain says on her website that she will carry the flame through the city on Jan. 1, 2010 as part of the Olympic Torch Relay.

The high-profile appearance comes as Twain prepares for a career comeback after her much-publicized break-up with music producer Robert (Mutt) Lange last year.

She's also set to appear on American Idol as a guest judge on the reality singing competition.

Twain said in a release that she is honoured to be a torch bearer for the 2010 Winter Olympics, which run Feb. 12 to 28 in Vancouver.

"I am proud to have been presented this unique opportunity and privilege and look forward to sharing the pride with my hometown and fellow Canadians as we are all proud of our country's chance to host the upcoming Winter Games," Twain said.

"I have a tremendous respect for the hard work, dedication and talent of the world's greatest athletes and will humbly carry and pass on the Olympic torch with a special pride for

Entertainment in brief

TRIAL Rapper Lil Wayne will go on trial next March on felony drug possession and weapons charges he faces in Yuma County, Ariz. The trial date was set during a court hearing in Yuma on Thursday. The case against Lil Wayne, whose real name is Dwayne Carter, stems from his arrest at a U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint on Interstate 8 east of Yuma in January 2008.

Authorities said they found cocaine, ecstasy and a handgun on his tour bus.

TV Sarah Brown will be checking out of ABC's General Hospital and into CBS' The Bold and the Beautiful, and she won't get a moment's rest in between. The actress's last appearance on the ABC daytime soap as Claudia Zacchara is set for Nov. 5. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winfrey and Perry talk about Push and Precious

MOVIES Oprah Winfrey was so taken by Sapphire's novel Push that she read it more than once.

Yet even though the talk-show host has made best-sellers of unknown books, Winfrey didn't think even her staggering influence could make Push — the story of an obese, illiterate black teen who suffers unspeakable abuse — something that millions would want to read.

So when Winfrey heard producer and director Lee Daniels had adapted Sapphire's book into the acclaimed movie Precious, with an all-star cast including Mo'Nique, Mariah Carey, Lenny Kravitz and others, she was so impressed that she decided to lend her coveted endorsement to the film by signing on as its executive producer, along with hit filmmaker Tyler Perry.

In a joint interview, the two spoke about why Precious moved them, what message it sends and why more stars should pay it forward.

AP: In an age when the world now sees images of African-American young women such as Sasha and Malia Obama, why is it still important to tell the story of girls like Precious?

WINFREY: For as many stories as there are hues and colours in the African-American race, this is just one. I feel about this story the same way I felt about The Color Purple. It is now 24 years ago that we did that movie. This feels like a modern-day Color Purple. Precious feels like a Celie who lives in Harlem.

PERRY: This story has not been told yet and it is still going on. It is still present in our society and I think that somebody had to do it.

AP: You're both successful. That being said, what makes you want to continue to give back to others when you could easily just focus on your own projects?

WINFREY: One of the reasons why I am still doing what I am doing and we remain the No. 1 talk show for the past 24 years is because I stay connected to the essence of who I am. I make a living out of being myself. You can't turn your back on who you are nor where you came from.

AP: Oprah, you said this movie split you open. What about it resonated with you?

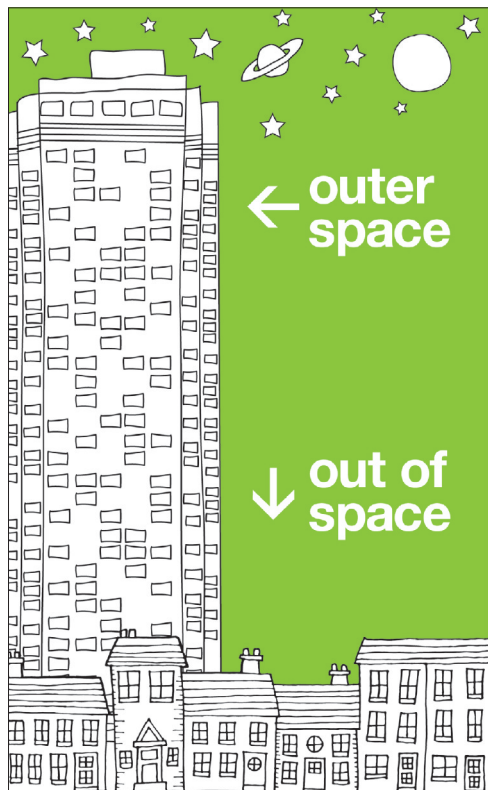

WINFREY: What struck me is that you can live in those circumstances and still find hope. You can't do that on your own. Somebody has to show it to you. For me it was teachers. That is why I love the character Ms. Rain (played by actress Paula Patton) because Ms. Rain allowed her to see that in herself. Nobody can make you see it.

No more husbands for Madonna

NOT THE MARRYING KIND

Madonna wants to put all the rumours about her planning to marry Jesus Luz to rest. She stopped by David Letterman's talk show, where she explained her previous marriage to Guy Ritchie by pointing out it was "the Bush years ... a good time to be out of America." When pressed about any future nuptials, Madonna was clear. "I think I'd rather get run over by a train," she said.

'A dangerous game'

EXTORTION CASE A lawyer for John Travolta testified Thursday that he warned a former Bahamas senator she would not get away with an alleged scheme to extort $25 million from the movie star.

Attorney Michael McDermott said the defendant, Pleasant Bridgewater, contacted him by telephone and demanded the money on behalf of a paramedic who had treated the actor's 16-year-old son, Jett, following a seizure that led to his death.

The pair allegedly threatened to go to the media with a consent form that the actor signed to have his autistic son taken to an airport and flown to the U.S. for treatment. Travolta later changed his mind and Jett died at a local hospital Jan. 2.

McDermott said he told Bridgewater during the Jan. 12 phone conversation that she was committing a crime.

"I then told her: 'You are playing a very dangerous game, lady. I do not assent to your demands. I will go to the police,'" McDermott said.

Bridgewater and the paramedic, Tarino Lightbourne, have pleaded not guilty to extortion charges at the trial that began Sept. 21.

Engagement off for McGowan

GIVE THE RING BACK Rose McGowan has broken off her engagement — again, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The former Charmed star has split from director Robert Rodriguez for the second time since they got engaged in October 2007.

They have yet to release a statement explaining the reason for the break-up. The pair met in 2007 when the 36-year-old actress starred in Rodriguez's film Planet Terror.

After a whirlwind romance, Rodriguez divorced his wife of 16 years and proposed to McGowan. The pair split less than one year later, only to reconcile after a few months apart.

They were reportedly planning to wed this year.

Winehouse's love messages

FACEBOOK CONFESSIONS Divorce doesn't seem to be stopping Amy Winehouse and Blake Fielder-Civil from expressing their love for each other — over Facebook.

The troubled singer sent her ex-husband a message recently reminiscing about old times and saying she loved him, according to the Sun. Fielder-Civil replied in kind, then in a sepa-

Apparently this was news to the show's producers, who tell the newspaper, "It would be a great story, but I'm afraid he isn't lined up to do the show."
